"People and Planet First"

As global leaders are talking about climate change, more and more activists are being threatened and killed for protecting the forests, waters and biodiversity that our people and our planet are most in need of. The most vulnerable members of our human family are bearing the largest burden dealing with the worst impact of climate change and facing negative effects of ill-planned, top down climate 'solutions'. We know the choices we make today will shape our communities, our economy, our health and the health of our planet for years to come. We need to transition to a position of an economy that addresses internal human development. We must insure that people and the planet are at the center of our just recovery. For some years the implementation of human rights by Canadian companies was voluntary, this has not been successful. The obligation to prevent human rights violations must be legally binding. Canadian companies need to take responsibility in the protection of people and planet.

Sabas Portillo, Director of Caritas Choluteca, Honduras, a partner of D&P "Given the institutional weakness and poor social defence practices of the Honduran government, many companies and businesses have neglected to protect and respect human rights in the communities where they operate, without facing any consequences for their actions. This Canadian initiative to push for a legislation that forces companies to carry out due diligence in addressing the human rights impacts of their practices will help us to prevent this from continuing to happen."
