The Outline for the upcoming green projects to St Monica's.

2) Caring for the Earth for family and personal growth

Caring for the planet and for our collective health as living beings are ways to grow as an individual and as a family. Moreover, engaging in initiatives that promote harmony with nature and climate builds networks and makes friends, it's a social and also apostolic activity. In fact, it is happening already, close to us. For instance, at the St. Francis of Assisi Parish, parishioners are improving their health with the harvest of urban agriculture in their Parc Extension parking lot; at St. John Brébeuf, gardens offer meditation and cooling for people suffering through the summer heat waves in LaSalle; Camp Cosmos at St. James United allows hundreds of students and families worked together in twelve languages to compost and build gardens at McGill University.

How we see and perceive the Lord's Creation every day, how we marvel at natural phenomena and living beings, starts with our family. As part of our Church and community life, we can share with our family members how to care for the millions of species that God gave us to protect and care – even in our backyards and gardens. You can show how you, as a family member, are aware and respect nature as it gives us well-being and health. You can help make a family commitment and embrace this divine mandate along with the others that Jesus gave us: the responsibility for the planet, that comes with being sons and daughters of God.
